"Nacimiento" 20th Century Polychrome, ceramic sculptures from Metepec, State of Mexico, Mexico

A MEXICAN CHRISTMAS

Christmas, a joyful time in Mexico is also a time for tradition and ritual. It is celebrated from December 16th through Christmas Eve with nightly "posadas" and ends with the "Day of the Three Kings" on January 6th when children receive their gifts. During this time "nacimientos" (nativity scenes) are displayed in homes and carried during the posadas.

Nacimientos appear in all the markets from early December through Christmas. The ceramic figures range in size from miniatures an inch or two to a majestic 2-3 feet tall. The clothing of the figures is standard, but each craftsman is free in his choice of colors and stylistic decorations. The nacimientos from Metepec are brightly polychromed, while others from Tonala are quietly decorated with dark earth tones and then burnished for a rich, deep patina. The figures in a nacimiento include Mary and Joseph standing above the baby Jesus in his manger with the Three Kings attending. The craftsman may include angels, shepherds, and any number of animals. The nacimiento is displayed on a table in the living room and is the focus of many Christmas celebrations.

On the evening of December 16th the traditional "posadas" or search for lodgings begins. Mary and Joseph's search for a place to stay on their journey to Bethlehem is recreated every evening until Christmas Eve. As soon as it is dark, two small children carrying a litter, decorated with figures of Mary, Joseph and an angel, lead a procession of friends and relatives to the darkened home of a neighbor. Everyone carries lighted candles an sings litanies; and when they finish singing ask for lodging. The immediate answer from the man of the house is no; they are told everyone is asleep; and if they don't leave at once they will be beaten. However, they are persistent and finally convince him of the importance of the travelers and the door is opened wide. Everyone is admitted amidst great rejoicing and upon entering the home, all kneel in front of the nacimiento to pray and sing. A joyous party follows with food, dancing, and pinatas.

In the spirit of this Christmas tradition the Mexican Museum is having an exhibit of nacimientos in Building D beginning December 8th through January 9th. The Museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5pm. A $1.00 donation is suggested. For more information call the Mexican Museum at 441-0404.

RADIO PRODUCERS HONORED

Three hundred broadcasters, journalists, city and state officials and friends jammed Western Public Radio's (WPR) studios in Building D recently.

The occasion was a reception for 12 radio producers from across the country who had just completed a ten-day national radio training workshop.

Participants were from 12 states and had been selected by a national panel from 800 applicants. Instructors were top producers from National Public Radio, NBC, BBC and CBS, plus independent audio artists.

Two similar sessions were held earlier in the year. Three more are schedule for 1983 and again in 1984. The project is funded by The Markle Foundation in New York City. Additional support comes from The National Endowment for the Arts. The Skaggs Foundation, The Corporation for Public Broadcasting, The California Arts Council, The California Council for the Humanities, The Otari Company, Ampex Corporation and Sound Genesis.

Frank Mankiewicz, President of National Public Radio, was an enthusiastic visitor at the last seminar. The session also had an international flavor. The Japan Broadcasting Corporation sent an observer from Tokyo. A producer from The Australian Broadcasting Commission will be at the next workshop in January.

The national project is based on WPR's experience at conducting local and regional training courses. These include sessions on basic radio production, basic voice techniques, writing for radio, advanced production, on-air board operation and voicing commercials.

A complete series of workshops covering all areas is scheduled for February, March and April. For information call Leo Lee, or Lynn Chadwick, 771-1160

Nigerian Fertility Dolls are displayed at the Folk Art International Sale

THE WORLD OF FOLK ART

Folk Art International is sponsoring its fourth annual sale of rare and sensibly priced folk and tribal art, November 24 through December 24. The sale offers a profusion of handmade clothing, baskets, pottery, jewelry, tapestries, furniture and low-priced toys and musical instruments from every continent. An annual attraction is the collection of Christmas decorations priced from $1 to $5.

Folk Art International (FAI), an alliance of folk art collectors and world travelers and a non-profit organization, is devoted to seeking out world folk arts and crafts threatened by extinction from advancing technology. "Folk art the world over is rapidly being killed off by TV, mass communications and overnight urbanization. . ." claimed FAI co-founders Georgia MacLeod Sales and Nancy Armstrong. ". . .with the advent of TV, young people head for big city factory jobs and lose patience with the hours required to turn out first-rate carvings, weavings and sculptures."

Rare and unusual crafts in the FAI sale include Appalachian handmade ocarinas, early American machine-toys, African puberty dolls and tribal stools, hand-blown Mexican glassware, Chinese handmade puppets, elk horn buckles and a variety of ethnic clothing.

The Folk Art Sale is open in Building A every day, November 24 through December 24, (closed Thanksgiving day) from 10am to 9pm. For more information call 873-3536

CALIFORNIA LIGHTHOUSES

Lighthouses: Sentinels of the California Coast is the title of the Maritime Humanities Center's December 9th presentation in Building A. Ralph C. Shanks Jr. will cover the California lighthouses and their fascinating lore.

Mr. Shanks is no stranger to the maritime history and lore of the west coast. His important books, "Lighthouses of San Francisco" and Lighthouses and Lifeboats of the Redwood Coast" established him as a leading authority on the subject. His works, co-authored with Janetta Thompson Shanks, are the results of nearly two decades of careful research that includes interviewing the last of America's lighthouse keepers and surfmen.

The dramatic and historic film about the lighthouse at St. George Reef will also be shown. It is one of the most dangerous and isolated reefs to accommodate a lighthouse. In 1892 the completed structure was the tallest on the Pacific Coast of North America, 134 feet in height, costing $704,000; the most expensive installation ever built.

The forum will begin at 7:30pm. A $1 donation is requested to cover the cost of refreshments. For more information about the Maritime Humanities Center and their monthly forums call 771-3488 or 771-3489. Offices are located in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area headquarters Building 201, Bay and Franklin Streets, Fort Mason.
